

Curriculum Vitae

Vincent E. Adejumo, PhD

Work: 352-392-5724

Email: vadejumo3@ufl.edu

Objective

To obtain a full-time teaching position within the discipline of African-American studies so that I can assist in the development of courses that are relevant to the discipline in an on-ground/online/hybrid format, and recruit students for the program major and minor.

EDUCATION

Ph.D., Political Science, University of Florida, Gainesville, FL, 2015

M.A., Political Science, University of Florida, Gainesville, FL, 2014

M.P.A., Masters of Public Administration, Strayer University, Washington, District of Columbia, 2010

B.S., Business Management; Management Information Systems; Human Resource Management, Florida State University, Tallahassee, FL, 2008

ACADEMIC HONORS AND AWARDS

Recipient, Diversity Enhancement Scholarship Award, University of Florida, 2011 – 2014

Recipient, Barbara Noreen Roth Memorial Award, University of Florida, 2013

Recipient, Board of Education Summer Doctoral Fellowship, University of Florida, 2011

ACADEMIC /TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Fulltime Lecturer, University of Florida, Gainesville, FL, Fall 2015 to Present

Teach Black Masculinity and Intro to African American Studies to classes averaging 50 students per section in an online format. Students come from varying backgrounds and higher education levels.

Adjunct Instructor, Santa Fe College, Gainesville, FL, Spring 2015 to Present

Teach Introduction to State and Local Politics to classes averaging 250 students in an online/hybrid format. Students come from varying backgrounds and higher education levels.

Adjunct Instructor, Santa Fe College, Gainesville, FL, Spring 2014 to Present

Teach Introduction to American National Government to classes averaging 250 students in an online/classroom format. Students come from varying backgrounds and higher education levels.

Adjunct Instructor, University of Florida, Gainesville, FL, Summer 2013 to Summer 2015

Teach Introduction to African American Studies to classes averaging 50 students in an online format. Students come from varying backgrounds and higher education levels.

Graduate Assistant, University of Florida, Gainesville, FL, Summer 2011 to Present

Assist the Director of the African American studies program with day to day activities which include creating and maintaining the program website, Chief Editor of the quarterly newsletter for the program, and assist other faculty and staff in the program with building classes for an online format.

Admissions Department Manager, Strayer University, Philadelphia, PA, March 2010 to February 2011

Provide guidance for admissions officers and coordinators to ensure that goals were met for new student recruitment and enrollment. Also was the lead liaison between the admissions office and the retention, financial aid, and academic departments.

Career Specialist Middleton High School, Tampa, FL, July 2008 to February 2009

Assist students in grades 9-12 in their decision of which career they should pursue. Various tools were used to assess their skills including the “Ready to Work” internship program and mock interviews. The position also entailed administering information about postsecondary institutions and scholarships as well as scheduling and interacting with representatives from various postsecondary institutions who recruited from Middleton High school. The position also entailed actively recruiting students of low socioeconomic status for federally subsidized afterschool tutoring programs.

PRESENTATIONS

Adejumo, Vincent, E. (2014), “African Americans in Paris: Josephine Baker, James Baldwin, and Dr. Anna Julia Cooper” Presented at the African Americans in Paris Study Abroad program, Paris, France.

Adejumo, Vincent, E. (2013), “Black Conservatism: A Theoretical and Practical Overview of Conservative Ideology of Black Americans at the Federal, State, and Local Level” Presented at the Association for the Study of African American Life and History, Jacksonville, FL.

Adejumo, Vincent, E. (2012), “A Critical Analysis of Black Liberation Theology in Comparison to Current Social Movements” Presented at the National Council of Black Studies, Atlanta, GA.

PROFESSIONAL AFFILIATIONS

- Member, Association for the study of African American Life and History (ASALH), 2013 to present
- Member, National Council for Black Studies (NCBS), 2012 to present
- President, Black Graduate Student Organization at the University of Florida (BGSO), 2012-2013
- Member, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity Incorporated (PBS), 2006 to present